About me:

Hi, my name is Oliver Looker, I am 19 years old, I live in Newburyport Massachusetts, and I am a dedicated Computer Science student and software developer. I study at NECC and I am passionate about applying myself to creative software development, and exploring what is possible. I'm incredibly creative and love to make art of all kinds, music most especially. My ability to use my imagination to solve problems is something that has helped me navigate countless responsibilities and disciplines. At the age of 16, I departed from Newburyport Public High School and attained my HiSet (State Issued High School Equivalency Credential), I then spent one and half years in the workforce, completing a total of almost 5000 hours, before departing on a journey around the United States in a van with a friend of mine that lasted a total of three and a half months. I present this information as a token of my ability to be pragmatic and responsible.
